Questions and Answers End of Your ILM (FCHP) Operating Agreement in B.C./Alberta

What is the ILM operating agreement?

The ILM operating agreement is the legal contract between Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC) and housing co-operatives funded under the Federal Co-operative Housing Program between 1986 and 1991. (Because the loan is an interest-linked mortgage, which the program pioneered in Canada, people normally speak of the ILM Program.)

Why did our co-op sign this agreement?

Your co-op signed an operating agreement as a condition of receiving assistance under the ILM Program. This included mortgage insurance for up to 100 per cent of the initial cost of the housing, annual operating assistance and access to rent supplements for a fixed number of resident households. (How many households depends on your province.) The operating agreement sets out the terms of your co-operative's relationship with CMHC.

What did our co-op and CMHC agree to?

Your agreement spells out how much money CMHC gives your co-op and your responsibility to manage well, maintain your property and fund a capital-replacement reserve and a security-of-tenure fund.

You can find detailed plain-language program guidelines for the ILM Program on the Agency's public website.

How long does the ILM operating agreement run?

The ILM agreements are not all the same, so you'll want to read yours carefully. You can find your co-op's own agreement on the Agency's client website. (You'll need your Agency username and password. If you've misplaced them, your relationship manager can help.)

Some of the ILM operating agreements end on the earlier of the date your mortgage is fully repaid or 35 years after you started paying back your loan. Others end on the later of the date your mortgage is fully repaid or 35 years after you signed your operating agreement. Ask your relationship manager if you are unsure of when your agreement ends.

What will happen to our rent supplements?

In ILM Program co-ops in B.C. and Alberta, assistance for low-income households comes in the form of monthly rent supplements from BC Housing or the Province of Alberta. This arrangement runs for 35 years and is separate from your CMHC operating agreement.

Your provincial rent-supplement agreement may extend for several years after your operating agreement expires, or for only a few months. Until your operating agreement ends, your co-operative will continue to file AIRs.

Before your provincial rent-supplement agreement expires, CMHC will invite you to join the Rental Assistance Program FCHI-2, which will allow you to continue housing assistance for qualified lower-income households.

Is this subsidy program like the ILM Program?

The Rental Assistance Program has some new requirements but fewer rules than the ILM program, although you will continue to file an Annual Information Return. The Agency has developed three online tools that make those rules easier to follow. Your relationship manager can explain what you should expect once you've joined the program. Information is also available on the Agency's website.

Do all ILM co-ops have the chance to join the Rental Assistance Program?

Yes. Six months before you pay out your mortgage, CMHC will invite your co-op to join the Rental Assistance Program. (This is usually before your operating agreement has ended.) The offer is your opportunity to secure subsidies for qualified households that were not receiving a provincial rent supplement. (However, if any of your approved rent-supplement spaces is vacant, your co-op is not yet eligible to join the federal program.)

If you accept, your operating agreement will end when you join the program, and your co-op will be administering two subsidy programs for a limited time.

You'll get a second invitation six months before the end of your Rent Supplement Agreement. This offer is intended to replace the provincial rent supplements your co-op is about to lose. If you accepted the first proposal, the newly assisted units and the rent-supplement units will fold into the Rental Assistance Program in a seamless transition when your Rent Supplement Agreement runs out.

When our mortgage ends, what will change?

Your monthly Federal Assistance will end when you pay off your ILM mortgage.

Some co-ops may want to take out a new loan to renew their buildings or buy new property. They will need to do so on terms they can afford without government assistance.

When our operating agreement ends, what will change?

When your operating agreement ends, your co-op will no longer be bound by the pledges you made to CMHC when you started out. For instance, income limits for new members will no longer be mandatory, and your co-op can stop collecting surcharges from higher-income members.

If your co-op's operating agreement is ending and your rent-supplement agreement remains in force, we recommend that you subscribe to Annual Health Check. This is a fee-based Agency service that provides your co-op with a Basic or Premium package of Agency reports.

We know it sounds self-serving, but we strongly recommend that you sign up for Annual Health Check. These low-cost reports deliver an outside opinion on the health of your co-op's operations and how they compare with those of other co-ops, based on information available nowhere else.

Of course your board and management will have a general sense of how well you're doing, but without access to at least the basic version of these reports, your board and management will be flying blind.

Details about the Annual Health Check are available on the Agency's website. If you're not sure, please ask your relationship manager how this program can help your co-op.

If you haven't signed up for an Annual Health Check, your last Annual Information Return (AIR) to the Agency will normally be for the year in which your operating agreement ends. The Agency will confirm this with you. After you file your last AIR, you will receive a final package of Agency reports.

Your co-operative may have been developed over several phases and under more than one program. That means you have two or more operating agreements that end on different dates. If one of your agreements has ended, your year-end return to the Agency will change. Please check with your relationship manager for more information.

Some co-operatives also have a financial workout agreement with CMHC. Workout agreements impose new rules beyond those in the operating agreement. You can learn more by reading the Agency's Q&A on Workouts. If you have a workout agreement, it normally, but not always, ends when your operating agreement ends.

What will stay the same?

Your co-op will still come under your provincial co-operative act. The act's rules about board elections, members meetings and so on will still apply. Any reporting you do to the province now—about changes in your board of directors, for example—will continue.

Your co-op will still abide by provincial human-rights codes and employment laws, as well as municipal and provincial building by-laws and codes.

If your co-op joins the Rental Assistance Program, you will be able to apply to CMHC for grant and loan programs, just as you can now. These program are available from time to time to help pay for building condition assessments and other studies, and sometimes for capital projects.

Much of your co-op's life is defined by its own policies and by-laws or rules. After your operating agreement ends, these will still govern the actions of your board and membership, just as they do now.

Assuming your co-op is running well, your watchword should be "business as usual." However, we recommend that you review your rules or by-laws, perhaps with help from your local federation, to see what needs to change, such as rules about applicants' income level that are no longer in force.

Will we still need a capital replacement reserve?

Absolutely. The expiry of your operating agreement will mean that capital planning and prudent financial management are more important than ever.

Keeping a capital-replacement reserve will remain a vital part of taking care of your property. Your co-op will need to continue setting aside money in the reserve each year. In fact, you will want to put more aside, since your buildings will keep aging. Having a sound capital plan or asset-management plan that tells you how much to save and spend will be essential.

Will we own our co-op?

The members will own the co-op in just the same way they do now: together. The legal owner of the property will still be your co-op, which will continue to rent units to the members. The responsibility for running your business will lie with the board of directors elected by the members. This structure will not change.

Can some of us buy our units after our agreement ends and we no longer have a mortgage?

No. Provincial law varies, but, in every case, there are rules to keep non-profit housing co-operatives non-profit. It's easy to see why.

Canada's housing co-operatives were developed with public money raised from the taxes of millions of Canadians. They are a source of much-needed affordable housing. Many members who have since moved on contributed to their co-op's successful operation.

Would it be fair if a windfall benefit went to a household that just happened to be living in the co-op when the agreement ended? We say no.

Our buildings need major work. Did you say we could get another mortgage?

Your co-op should be able to get another mortgage without difficulty. But you will need some time, and likely some help, to assess your financial needs and prepare a package of information to support your loan request. The Agency's Q&A on Private Financing has some general advice about this process.

The first step is to make sure you have a current capital-replacement plan based on a recent building condition assessment. This will show you and the lender you hope to borrow from how much money you need. It will also show that your ability to repay won't be interrupted later by new building problems.

Lenders will use this and other information to assess your application. Both CHF Canada and CHF BC will help their members find new financing. Talk to them or your relationship manager about what else lenders look for and what you can do to qualify for a loan.

Can we add new units to our co-op or change unit sizes?

Yes. You will need to be clear about what the work will involve. Even if your co-op has underused or overlooked space, not all residents will want to see it turned into housing.

However, you may find that your members' needs have changed. Perhaps your co-op is filling one-bedroom units more readily than the larger sizes. Or your co-op may include only multi-story townhouses that are no longer ideal for empty nesters aging in place. If so, it may make sense for you to divide up some of your bigger units. You may even want to replace an existing structure with a new building.

Before undertaking a project like this, you'll want to look at all the pros and cons and understand what it will mean for your co-op. You will need expert help to plan carefully and prepare to qualify for a new mortgage.

Our co-op is on leased land. Can we extend our land lease?

This will depend on who owns the land. Alberta co-ops have no land leases. However, if your co-op is in B.C., your city or another public authority may be the owner. If so, you should feel free to ask CHF BC to help you make your case for a new lease.

If you have a lease from a private company, you may be able to buy the owner out—perhaps with help from a regional land trust—but you should expect to pay market value for the land. Make sure to keep CHF BC up to date on your progress with the negotiation.

Where can we get more information about the end of our operating agreement?

Talk to CHF Canada or CHF BC about the resources available as you plan for this next stage in your co-op's life.
